

Amy McCooe
United States
Level Up Village
Founder, Former CEO &
Managing Director

Amy McCooe is a lifelong learner who believes access to peer-to-peer global communication is a catalyst in developing empowered learners in today's world. Recognized as a leader who built an education company which was awarded the The National Association for Gifted Children's Global Awareness Award as well as EdTech Digest's 21st Century Learning Tools Award, her passion intersects at designing, implementing and evaluating innovative approaches to teaching and learning.

She brings her lifelong passion in global education to every endeavor. Amy built a company from ideation to acquisition in the highly competitive K12 industry over a 5-year period. The Level Up Village Program grew from theory to curriculum implementation in over 1,500 classrooms, reaching 60,000+ students and successfully landed as a business unit within a major player in the education market. She managed the creation of a global education platform which connected classrooms in more than 20 countries creating 1:1 collaboration and communication between teachers and students throughout the world focused on STEAM project based learning and design thinking. In this capacity, she and her team designed the global education professional development for over 2,000 teachers around the world.

On her quest to bridge innovation and education using global and local tools, she has integrated cross-cultural experiences in developing everyday STEM habits of mind in classrooms around the world.
