Berkeley

Elif was born in Austria, moved around a lot (she has lived in eight countries!) and went to high school in Turkey.

Elif is currently a student at the University of California, Berkeley studying Cognitive Science and minoring in Public Policy and Data Science. She recently earned her certificate in entrepreneurship and is looking for opportunities to explore the positive impact she can have on people's lives through innovative ideas. She is currently working on a Gates Foundation funded research project in Africa on AIDS prevention, by tackling social stigmas and other barriers individuals may have in the path to receiving treatment and finding the resources they need. Elif has an active role in the Associated Students of the University of California where she enjoys seeing the immediate impact her work has on students' lives.

Volleyball has had an important role in Elif's life, providing her with discipline, confidence and a sense of community. She was a licensed athlete in Turkey for seven years and participated in the USAV National Team camp for two years in a row. In her free time, Elif loves making Spotify playlists!
